Maybe there was a problem with my upbringing; perhaps I was born under a bad sign ... But I have never been able to stomach the idea that a government should decide what I can and cannot say, can and cannot do.

When anyone tells me I can't say fuck, I am suddenly stricken with Tourette's and screaming "Fuck, fuck, fuck!" If they tell me I can't masturbate onstage, I am overcome with the urge to strip with a vibrator up my ass.

Now, certain words and actions I like to steer clear of; as a matter of taste I prefer not to overuse the words "nigger," "kyke," and "boyfriend." I resist the temptation to murder and rape not because anyone tells me to, but because I have nurtured a morality that senses these things are unkind. Still, if The Man tells me not to rape or murder or scream "nigger Jew" or "Christian cunt," my natural disposition is to ask "Why the fuck not?"

I recently heard in the news the sad tale of a woman who was ordered off a plane for wearing a t-shirt that criticized the current presidential administration with the word "Fuck." So now I have to find a shirt that says "Fuck You You Fucking Fuck" before I board my flight to Hawaii tomorrow morning. Some people call this speech offensive. I call it a speech un-impediment.

Although all Americans are entitled to the First Amendment's protections of "speech" and "expression," many states have ruled that certain types of speech and expression are too offensive or obscene to be permissible. In fact many states find boobs and vaginas obscene, in spite of the fact that nearly every woman on earth has 'em.

As far as I can tell, what these states are saying is that MY BODY is offensive. And, after a cursory glance at any teen clothing store, one could surmise that these states find my body more offensive than a t-shirt that reads "Fuck You You Fucking Fuck."

Which is half the reason I live in Oregon. In Oregon my naked parts are viewed as "possibly distasteful to a large segment of society," but still entitled to protection and expression under the Oregon Constitution. Which is awesome.

I didn't fully understand just how awesome this was until I moved to NYC and had to slap a g-string on my stuff. Overnight my vagina and asshole were obscene, dangerous and a threat to polite society. And you better believe I fuckin' felt it! There is an implicit shame in requiring a woman to keep any part of her—brain or body—under wraps, whether it's a tit some kid is sucking on at a restaurant or a flash of gash at the corner strip club.

In Seattle, strippers were recently required to cover up, turn up the lights, and step four feet away from customers during table dances. This—to me—begs the question: if it is unseemly/obscene/ illegal to be 3 feet 11 inches from a customer, why is it suddenly ok to be one inch further away? And WHAT IF your pretty high heels and head are the full four feet away, but your well-endowed ass is six inches into the danger zone? Then what? The city shuts down the place and opens another Starbucks?

Here's what I find obscene, distasteful and harmful to society: Jessica Simpson, Western medicine, bad movies, not-free-range meat, President George W. Bush and the Christian right. Put a fuckin' g-string on those fuckers!

Ahem. Since it's Thanksgiving time, I'd like to close with some of that Christian bullshit I've been raving about. Thank you, God, for my friends, for strippers, for my beau and my brother; thank you for my cats, the Shins and my health; thank you for Yves St. Laurent mascara, retarded dwarves and Miranda July's Me and You and Everyone We Know. And thank you, sweet Jesus, for the Oregon Constitution and the Oregon Supreme Court, which last month decided two cases in favor of nude dancing. Amen.

Oregon Supreme Court Rules in Favor of Adult Industry—Well, Mostly...

By Lake James Perriguet, Esq.

On September 29, 2005, the Oregon Supreme Court issued its long-awaited decisions the cases State v. Ciancanelli and City of Nyssa v. Miss Sally's Gentlemen's Club.

The Ciancanelli case resulted from a conviction of Mr. Ciancanelli, who operated a lingerie modeling shop in Roseberg, Oregon. Two police officers visited his establishment and paid $100 at the front desk to watch a two-girl show during which the two girls performed oral sex on each other. Mr. Ciancanelli was charged with violating the statute criminalizing "sexual conduct in a live public show" and for "promoting prostitution."

At trial, Mr. Ciancanelli was convicted and he appealed to the Court of Appeals, which affirmed his convictions for both crimes. He appealed to the Oregon Supreme Court, arguing that the statute criminalizing "sexual conduct in a live public show" was unconstitutional.

Several Portland and Beaverton area adult businesses joined forces, creating an Oregon chapter of the Association of Club Executives (ACE) and, with the help of lawyers Bradley Woodworth and Lake Perriguet, filed a friend of the court brief arguing that the statute was unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court agreed, and ruled that the free speech provisions of the Oregon Constitution protect speech "on any subject whatever," including shows that involve live sex acts.

However, the court upheld Mr. Ciancanelli's conviction for "promoting prostitution" because the girls were paid to have sex.

What does this mean for Oregon adult businesses?

Some live sex shows will be permissible after this decision: only those in which performers are unpaid, and those in which persons perform alone or without touching another person sexually. So, clearly, completely nude dancing and masturbation shows are protected speech in Oregon. However, live sex shows involving sexual contact between two or more people (at least one of whom is paid) are now illegal, according to the Supreme Court, because the presenters of such shows are "promoting prostitution."

The promoting prostitution statute provides, in part:

"(1) A person commits the crime of promoting prostitution if, with intent to promote prostitution, the person knowingly:

"(a) Owns ... a place of prostitution or a prostitution enterprise; or

"(b) Induces or causes a person to engage in prostitution ... ; or

"(c) Receives or agrees to receive money or other property, other than as a prostitute being compensated for personally rendered prostitution services, pursuant to an agreement or understanding that the money or other property is derived from a prostitution activity; or

"(d) Engages in any conduct that institutes, aids or facilitates an act or enterprise of prostitution."

"Prostitution" does not occur unless (1) there is payment for an act, and (2) two people are present.

Mr. Ciancanelli's conviction was based on his operation of a business that "offered a menu of 'shows,' to be performed for individual customers or small groups upon payment of a fee." In one of the shows, two women engaged in oral sex with each other. By presenting that show, the Court held, Ciancanelli "direct[ed] and profit[ed] from a prostitution enterprise," in violation of the statute.

SEATTLE STRIPPERS GET SLAPPED

While Oregon adult industry types are toasting our great state's sage justices, our poor neighbors to the north are crying in their ten-dollar sodas. Just weeks after a federal judge ruled that Seattle's 17-year moratorium on allowing new strip clubs was unconstitutional, its City Council has approved stricter regulations for strip clubs. The new rules require a four-foot distance between dancers and customers, brighter lighting and "more clothes", amongst other things. Dancers and club owners are screaming foul; table dancing is the name of the game in Seattle, and the new rules will put a serious dent in profits.

—editor

"Clearly, completely nude dancing and masturbation shows are protected speech in Oregon."

To be sure, a person violates the statute only if he or she acts "with intent to promote prostitution." It is unclear whether the mere intention to make a profit by making available to the public, for a fee, a display of persons engaged in sexual conduct is enough.

What about making a porn film?

ACE, in its brief to the Supreme Court, argued vigorously that the creation of films and images involving human sexuality must also be protected. Unfortunately, the Supreme Court did not clearly rule on this issue. As it stands, the creation of a pornographic film or image, in which the actors are paid, could arguably fit within the definition of promoting prostitution.

Laws specifically targeting adult businesses held unconstitutional.

The Supreme Court ruled in the case City of Nyssa v. Miss Sally's Gentlemen's Club that the City of Nyssa's ordinance requiring nude dancers to be at least four feet away from any audience member was a city rule that was aimed only at the adult industry. Miss Sally had been slapped with a $75 fine when a dancer's hair touched a person in the audience. She defended herself, with the help of local attorney Laura Graser, all the way to the state's highest court, where her $75 fine was ultimately tossed.

The court ruled that Nyssa's law was aimed at a particular, disfavored type of speech, and it was therefore unconstitutional. The message: cities in Oregon should apply their resources to real problems because nude dancing is protected speech.

Lake James Perriguy, of Bradley J. Woodworth & Associates, PC, may be reached at lake@woodworthlaw.com

THE DOWNLOW

Oregon Law protects your right to masturbate, finger your asshole, pinch your titties and grab your crotch—for money!—onstage. You can even have sex onstage, provided no one is making money off of the endeavor. HOWEVER! This last provision could prove to be a pain in Oregon's ass. Allowing "sexual conduct in a live show" while criminalizing the same sexual conduct in a live show in which someone makes MONEY would seem to implicate theatrical productions across the board.

Exotic recommends that the State of Oregon throw out the baby with the bath water and allow consenting adults to fuck however they want.

Are you an overworked law school student looking to make some quick cash between cramming for exams? Are you a nursing mother who isn't queasy about breast milk fetishes? So if you're in the mood to masturbate for moolah, you're in luck.

Peep shows have been banned in Oregon for the past three years after an Oregon Court of Appeals ruling declared them illegal. By October 1st the booths at Mr. Peeps were all a-buzz with young ladies pleasuring themselves. You can be sure the customers who waited three long years to see them were pleased, too! Viva Pornland!

THE VANISHING HAND JOB

MOURNING THE DEATH OF
"HEAVY PETTING"

If the boy has a car, they usually go for a ride and park in one of the half-dozen popular petting spots—the Buggy Wash, the Three Pines, near the Boy Scout Camp, in the park, near the graveyard. Heavy petting followed by sexual relations often occurs in the parked car, except in the very coldest weather.

—Marriage and the American Ideal, by Floyd M. Martinson, 1960

Petting...is now not only permissible but an almost universal practice to a greater or less degree....[T]he desire thus aroused can carry over when they sit down together on the sofa or out in the car parked in the shadows outside. This is the danger in petting.... Everybody is as full of unexpected characteristics, good and bad, as a plum pudding is of nuts and candies. Youth is a time for learning in many ways. Boys and girls need to talk and talk and talk, about anything from outer space to inner beliefs. They should play games, from tennis to crossword puzzles....They should...eat with the crowd at Pete's Pizza Heaven, alone on sandwiches they brought in their pockets on a hike, or with each other's families in their own homes.

—Sex and the Adolescent, by Maxine Davis, 1960

Along, long time ago, teen pregnancy was a matter of deep shame rather than an easy way to get out of high school and onto Maury. These days, your typical mongrelized TV-addled hamsterfucker knows what a "DP" and a "Dirty Sanchez" are by age six, and chances are they've tried one or both.

But back in the 1950s and early 1960s, open talk about sex was still taboo, which made it more exciting in the same way that severe hunger makes a hamburger taste better. The female orgasm was still only hinted at, like the Lost Continent of Atlantis. Males and only males were thought to have uncontrollable sex drives, and the only way to give them "relief" while still retaining one's hymen and reputation was through the act of "heavy petting"—what today is crassly referred to as a "handjob." Petting was sometimes mutual, and the occasional female received a sloppy finger-banging, but its chief purpose was to contain the Male Genital Stegosaurus until which time it could be used for the pro-social purpose of marital intercourse and its implicit baby-making.

The euphemism "petting" dates back at least to the flapper era of the 1920s, when renegade youth would throw "petting parties," but it didn't fully blossom until the post-nuclear, whole-milk Eisenhower days of the 1950s. "Petting" was distinguished from "necking" in that it covered all areas below the neck, with "heavy" entering the fray once one wandered south of the beltline. On the "baseball" continuum of sexual slang, it hovered around third without heading for home.

But that was ages ago, before everyone and their aunt was doing anal, and today a handjob seems quaintly unnecessary unless you're jacking yourself. Heavy petting has gone the way of the hickey and the non-penetrative first date. Not to mention its functional impracticality: A chick's hand on your cock is always more inept than your own, and I would assume the same applies for finger-banging her. They'll jack and knead and tug and yank, but it's all cow-milking ineptitude, an impediment to copping one's sacred nut.

Properly speaking, I've only heavily pet with one girl. She was an Italian maiden with a faint mustache, hair around her nipples, and a monster muff surrounding her implausibly stanky snatch. This was back in the 1970s, and her technique was straight up-and-down with no hint of flashier methods such as The Double Whammy, The Anvil Stroke, The Shuttle Cock, The Bookends, The Flame, The Base Clutch, The Love Tug, The Two-Timer, or the Thigh-Swatter. Sitting in her parents' living room listening to an Electric Light Orchestra album, we fumbled under a quilted comforter, poking and grasping for hours without ever approaching orgasm.

These days, though, I think it would make me cum, because we've reached a point where even felching is no longer dirty, so reaching third base and getting a hickey suddenly are.

"Back in the 1950s and early 1960s, open talk about sex was still taboo, which made it more exciting in the same way that severe hunger makes a hamburger taste better."

"I don't want strip clubs opening up in our neighborhoods... As a city, we have a clear duty to protect our neighborhoods from activities that aren't appropriate near homes, schools, and churches."

—Seattle Mayor Greg Nickels

Portland, Oregon, and Seattle, Washington—so close, and yet so far away when it comes to their approach on interacting with the world of adult entertainment. The past month has given us two very contrasting amendments to their constitutions in the regulation of exotic dancers and adult entertainment businesses.

Let's go ahead and give you the specifics first. In Salem, Oregon, the Supreme Court struck down as unconstitutional a state law against conducting live sex shows and a local ordinance regulating conduct of nude dancers. Both restrictions violate the Oregon constitution's guarantees of free speech and free expression, the court said in a pair of 5-1 decisions. Oregon's constitution (considered to be the nation's most liberal in its protection of free speech), adopted in 1859, says, "No law shall be passed restraining the free expression of opinion, or restricting the right to speak, write or print freely on any subject whatever."

Now hailing from Portland, and working within the warm sticky womb of the adult-entertainment industry, allow me to translate in layman's terms what exactly has happened out there. Several years ago, for the first time in decades, Oregon's constitution was amended to restrict dancers from performing what could be considered a sexual act. It specifically targeted lingerie modeling shops, AKA "jack shacks." These businesses provided one-on-one shows with nude models (who would do a lot more than dance) in a private room. Customers are encouraged to jerk it silly while the nubile models would perform masturbation, toy shows and two-girl shows—all for a fee, of course—in addition to the businesses' show fee, which ranged from thirty to fifty dollars. This attack on Oregon's adult entertainers expanded into the strip clubs as well. It was their first attempt at policing the dancers' behavior and resulted in citations being issued to one of Portland's largest gentlemen's clubs in which a dancer had apparently been spanking her own ass on stage, therefore performing a sexual act.

After two years of rallying, Oregon dancers can not only spank their own asses again, but "live sex shows" are once again legal in its establishments. Some idiots may interpret this as full-on fucking onstage—not the case, kiddies. "There is a difference between legitimate expression in a performance and illegal conduct," (having sex for money) says Dave Fidanque, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Oregon. While an incident occurring in Roseburg, Oregon, in which lingerie-shop owner Charles R. Ciancanelli was arrested for promoting prostitution because he profited from having two women perform sex for money was upheld, the new law now clearly allows masturbation shows as once again politically correct in Oregon, a state that allows its citizens to decide for themselves what they want to watch, read and hear rather than letting these personal choices be decided upon by its elected officials such as Justice Paul J. De Muniz, who opposed the law's instatement. "The idea that the Victorian-era drafters of the Oregon constitution sought to bring public masturbation and sexual intercourse within the purview of constitutional free-speech protection is difficult to comprehend," says De Muniz. He also wrote that the constitution should allow a city to require dancers to stay four feet from customers. "Limiting proximity of the dancers is simply not limiting expression," he wrote. Sound like anyone we know here in Seattle?

Meanwhile, back in the Emerald City, a sordid little chain of events has come to be so controversial, so complicated, so ridiculous and so goddamned political that it has become known to us as "Strippergate." I'll try to put all the pieces in order for you and let you decide for yourselves as to why all of this has happened to Seattle's adult-entertainment industry.

After seventeen years of "emergency moratoriums" on new adult clubs opening in Seattle, it appears it finally bit them in the ass. Originally intended to be temporary, the fact that it lasted seventeen years points out its lack of credible reasoning here. While the city cites that it needed more time to adopt new land-use regulations regarding such business, in the past seventeen years, not a single-land use regulation has been adopted. When Seattle club owner Bob Davis intended on opening a new gentlemen's club on Fifth Avenue, he decided to take it to the mat with the city regarding the moratorium, leading to Judge James Robart's ruling that the moratorium amounts to prior restraint on free expression—meaning the city is legally liable for failing to process a business's strip-club application. The next step is a trial for damages. Trial date is set for a year from now, in which Davis is seeking $5 million.

So while our city is not able to stop a new strip club from opening, Mayor Greg Nickels has updated Seattle's Adult Entertainment Code for the first time in seventeen years and inserted new regulations that will make it downright insane to even consider opening a club in this town. Narrowly passing City Council's approval on a 5-4 margin, the following rules will now be enforced"

1. Strip clubs must now provide lighting bright enough to make "all objects" clearly visible.
2. Strippers may no longer take tips of any kind directly from a customer, but tips may be collected in a container provided by and collected by the club.
3. Dancers performing off-stage are to be clothed and remain at least four feet away from the patron.
4. Managers and operators of strip clubs will now be held responsible for any violations of the code in addition to the dancers as well.
5. Violations of the rules could lead to the suspension or revocation of a club's or an exotic entertainer's license. Clubs that continue to violate the code could be closed as a public nuisance.

BY SPOOKY X

A TALE OF TWO TITTIES

Years ago, an earlier attempt to initiate a similar ruling by then-council-incumbent Margaret Pageler was simply cast aside and laughed at. No surprise that Seattle's City Council has lost its sense of humor over this in the shadow of a 2003 election scandal in which campaign donations from Rick's Cabaret owner Frank Colacurcio, Jr., and his associates contributed an estimated $39,000 (allegedly assigned to various different contributors to avoid the $650-per-donor limitations) to three City Council members who had voted to override the planning department on the strip club's parking-lot rezoning. When the "re"zone, is "re"voted and now, "re"jected, an investigation exposed that the donations made by Colacurcio's had gone to then-incumbents Judy Nicastro, Heidi Wills and Jim Compton, who had miraculously had a change of heart and joined the 5-4 majority approving the club's parking lot rezoning. The contributions were returned, the incumbents paid fines to the Seattle Ethics and Elections Commission for violating city ethics rules, and two out of three of them lost their re-election bids, while court proceedings currently develop in filing charges on the Colacurcios and their associates.

This is the first of a two-part attack on the strip-club industry by Nickels, as his next move is to create zoning regulations this fall for strip clubs controlling the clubs' proximity to schools, churches. The move will most likely be applauded and accepted by the City Council.

So on to the present day. Let's go ahead and summarize this in Underground speak. Strip clubs are bad, Seattle doesn't want any more of 'em. Lazy and disorganized politicians somehow manage to stop any new clubs from opening with a "seventeen-year-long temporary ban" on new clubs. Finally, someone gets pissed off enough to challenge these morons, and all of a sudden, the city realizes they fucked up and loses their precious moratorium. Coincidentally, the reigning strip-club godfathers have just gotten caught making "questionable" campaign donations to get themselves a parking-lot expansion, (a practice that takes place in a majority of Seattle's largest corporations that never seems to cause a problem) so now the bad strip-club gangsters are in trouble. So, since they can't stop new clubs from opening now, how about if they just make it so goddamn impossible to make a dime in the adult-entertainment industry that all the bad, evil, sexually dysfunctional deviants will all just go away, or in this case, to places like, ummm...Portland?

So does Seattle get what they want? In their pathetic vision, I'm sure they do. But think about this—there are currently 554 adult entertainers that are licensed in the city of Seattle (a dip from an average of 722 each year since 2000), and 20 licensed managers (also down from an average of 32 since 2000). This is not including the DJs, waitresses, bartenders, doormen, valets, and seamstresses who may be put out of work.

Small business owners who depend on the four Seattle clubs to use their services could be affected, including accountants, attorneys, business consultants, beverage distributors, cleaning services, printing facilities, taxi-cab drivers, day-care facilities, hair, nail and tanning salons, chiropractors, retailers who specialize and cater to specific types of club wear, and any other business you can think of that is included in a weekly or bi-weekly basis for the upkeep of being in the adult entertainment business.

And then there is the financial losses that these fucking geniuses are sacrificing out of their own greedy little bank accounts as well. Last year, there were about 197,000 visits to the city's clubs—not including the Lusty Lady peep-show—generating $79,000 in admission taxes.

And then there are the patrons, aside from the fact that the ordinance also makes customers as well as entertainers subject to the new rules and penalties, there is the long-standing analysis that if one's need for sexual entertainment is repressed, all hell is going to break loose.

"I think Seattle is going to become a laughingstock....We are going to look like the Moral Majority up here," says Bob Davis. Attorneys representing Seattle strip clubs intend on filing a lawsuit challenging the new rules which will go into effect either 180 days after the mayor signs the law or 30 days after the mayor submits proposed zoning rules for club locations, whichever is later.

They tried this in Oregon, kids, but the Portland industry's sheer numbers made it a much tougher nut to crack. But the Emerald City's "oh so liberally conservative masses" have orchestrated this whole mess to accomplish one thing—to take our rights as American citizens and insert them straight up our collective asses—all in the name of a political fiasco, poor legislation, and inept city managing. Seattle fucking rocks!

Supposed petitions are popping up all over Seattle to try and right this wrong, and at least put these issues into an election so that the people of this city are allowed the choice to decide on their own what is right or wrong. Of course, you are more than welcome to forward your opinions on to the maestro of this ridiculous symphony at:

http://www.seattle.gov/mayor/citizen_response.htm

(Publisher's note: Just for the record, no inappropriate contributions were made to Exotic Underground to take this particular stance on the subject. As a matter of fact, not a single goddamned Seattle strip club has even bought a friggin' ad from this magazine—they apparently find their advertising dollars better spent in publications that seem to support Mayor Nickel's decisions.)

It's that time again for ya boy Mack to give ya'll the 411 on whatz crackin' 'round town. In this month's column, I'll be reviewing two new CD's that you definitely need to check out. Then there's the Damian Marley concert coming up on Friday the 18th of November. Plus professional boxing returns to the P-Town. Let's get it crackin'!!!

First Up — Two Hot Jointz!

There has been a great deal of local talent on the rise lately, and I'm pumped about some new heat that's droppin' for the winter!

Meezilini is unleashing a smokin' hot CD & DVD on November 15th. I had the chance to talk with Jon "Smurf Luchiano" Norman, Executive Producer of 2Real Records, and he said that Meezilini is ready for international recognition! Guest appearances on the album include: 50 CENT, The Game, Luni Coleone, Bosko, GOTM, Wise One, and Sugafree! Meezilini has some heavy hitters pushing this new project with him. Sometimes in this music industry a little push goes a long way, especially if you have a hot artist like Meezilini! I myself have seen this cat grow into his own zone, and I can't wait for his new joint to drop. Big ups man, and congratulations to 2Real Records!!! More info at 2RealRecords.net

Potnus is also turnin' up the heat this winter by hittin the streetz with their new album Members Only. It will be in stores January 31, 2006. I recently chatted with one of the members of the group, Bill E. Shakes, and I asked him how he would describe their style. He was able to sum it up for me in three words by saying, "It's the Future!" After listening to their new music, it was refreshing to hear some originality mixed with some raw flavor!!! My favorites on the new CD are tracks #1, #11, #14 (somethin' for the strip clubs), and #15. To my DJ homies out there, you'll like

by j.mack

sex is VERY good

Was it good for you?

Science is answering that age-old question with a resounding yes! An increasing number of studies confirm that sex is very good for you and your health. Indeed, regular and frequent sex can add years to your life, not just life to your years. Here are a dozen amazing and wonderful health benefits which come from making love, great reasons for you and your partner to connect as often as possible.

#1) The bed may be the single greatest piece of exercise equipment.

The fact is that sex is good exercise and exercise is good for your body. Making out is a great way to bum off calories. A 120-pound woman can burn 4.2 calories per minute during sex. Also, this pleasurable activity results in a good cardiovascular workout. During sex, the heart rate rises from 70 to 150 beats per minute. It is estimated that a vigorous sexual encounter burns some 200 calories, the same as running 15 minutes on a treadmill. Muscular contractions during sexual activity work the pelvis, thighs, buttocks, arms, neck and thorax.

#2) Sex is really, really good for women.

There's a reason why women feel better after sex. Research reveals that sex helps pump up a woman's endocrine system which, in turn, boosts hormone production. Some studies show that women who make love at least once a week have twice as much estrogen as women who make love sporadically or not at all. This increase in estrogen gives women a wide range of benefits. "It keeps the cardiovascular and circulatory systems running smoothly, lowers LDL cholesterol (the bad one), raises HDL cholesterol (the good one), helps keep skin smooth, and may help prevent depression," says Winnifred Cutler, PhD., president and founder of the Athena Institute for Women's Wellness in Haverford, Pennsylvania. Estrogen is also instrumental in maintaining bone density in women, thus reducing the risk of osteoporosis, a serious problem for women as they age.

#3) Sex lengthens life.

One of the most comprehensive sexual health studies was done by researchers at Queens University in Belfast, Ireland. They tracked the mortality of nearly 1,000 middle aged men over the course of a decade. The carefully constructed project compared persons of similar circumstances, age and health. Its findings, published in the British Medical Journal, reported that men with the highest frequency of orgasm had a death rate half that of those who had sex less often. Add to that study conclusions drawn by Chicago internist Dr. Michael F. Roizen, MD, author of Real Age Makeovers. For his book, Dr. Roizen reviewed more than 25,000 studies linking lifestyle factors to longevity. He says you can add two years to your life simply by regularly hooking up with your mate in the bedroom. Dr. Roizen says "regularly" means just twice a week.

#4) Your immune system is boosted.

With stronger immunity your body can better fight off colds and headaches. People who averaged one to two sexual encounters per week had higher levels of immunoglobulin A, which protects against disease. Additionally, people who had sex two or three times a week reported fewer migraines because sex releases hormones, which block headaches.

#5) Your heart will be stronger and happier.

British researchers looked at 900 men over the course of ten years. They found that men who had sex twice or more a week had a lower risk of heart attack than men who had sex less often.

#6) In women sex prevents some gynecological problems.

One study published in the journal Gynecologic and Obstetric Investigations strongly suggests that sexual activity may prevent endometriosis, a common gynecological condition that occurs when the tissue lining inside a woman's uterus grows in other places, such as the ovaries or fallopian tubes. This growth can cause much pelvic pain and even infertility. The study discovered that women who were sexual-

for your health

By Victor M. Parachin

ly active during menstruation were 1.5 times less likely to develop endometriosis than women who didn't have sex during their periods. Researchers also learned that orgasm during menstruation lowered this risk. Study author Harvey J. Kilman, MD, PhD, a researcher at Yale University of Medicine explains that anything that contributes to menstrual debris going backward into the pelvis might increase the risk of endometriosis. The contractions of the uterus which occur during sex and orgasm may help push menstrual debris out of the uterus.

#7) For men there is a decreased risk of prostate cancer.

According to a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, frequent ejaculation helps protect the prostate from cancer. An Australian study came to a similar conclusion. It found that men in their 20s who ejaculated more than five times a week were one third less likely to develop aggressive prostate cancer than men who ejaculated four to seven times a month. Scientists theorize that ejaculating regularly may lower risk because cancer causing substances get flushed out of the body in the seminal fluid instead of remaining in the prostate.

#8) Pain relief

If you have a headache, don't let that stop you from making love. Many people report that their headaches disappear after having sex. That's not their imagination. Immediately before orgasm, levels of the hormone oxytocin surge to five times the normal level. That forces the release of endorphins which alleviates a variety of pains such as headache, arthritis and even migraines. In women, sex also prompts increased production of estrogen, which reduces the pain of PMS.

#9) Cold and flu fighter.

Here's another good reason to snuggle up during cold and flu season. Researchers at Wilkes University in Pennsylvania report that individuals who have sex once or twice a week show 30% higher levels of the antibody immunoglobulin A which is known to boost the body's overall immune system.

#10) Your overall appearance improves.

Many people notice that the morning after sex, their skin looks great. There's a reason for that. As partners make love, the skin's blood vessels dilate, producing a flush that can last for hours. In addition, sex also makes partners perspire which opens up pores, expelling toxins from the body and leaving you both with a radiant, rosy flush.

#11) You'll stress less and sleep more.

Most individuals have had the pleasant experience of falling into a deep, restful sleep after having sex. New research indicates that sex does indeed act as a sedative by immediately reducing anxiety and stress. One recent study done by researchers at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore and the University of Wisconsin in Madison studied college students who simply fantasized about sex. They reported feeling less anxious, depressed, and angry than those who didn't think about sex. In fantasy or reality, sex is a calming sedative. Interestingly, psychiatrist Edward Hallowell, MD, director of the Hallowell Center for Cognitive and Emotional Health in Concord, Mass., often prescribes a half hour of exercise every other day for his anxious patients. "And on the days you don't exercise," he tells them, "have sex. Sex and exercise are both great anti-anxiety medications."

#12) Intimacy is a healing power.

While sex is good for men and women, sex with love is even better. Dr. Dean Ornish, author of Love and Survival: The Scientific Basis For The Healing Power of Intimacy, says that "an open heart can lead to the most joyful and ecstatic sex." His observations and research on intimacy and its health benefits lead him to conclude: "anything that promotes feelings of love and intimacy is healing." His observation is mirrored by Felice Dunas, PhD., author of Passion Play: Ancients' Secrets for a Lifetime of Health and Happiness Through Sensational Sex. In her book she extols the healing, unifying power of human sexuality: "Isn't life easier when you're having great sex? Don't mountains turn into molehills? Isn't your step lighter and your mind clearer? Don't everyday annoyances bother you less? Aren't you more at peace with yourself, more optimistic, more content with your lot in life? You no doubt feel healthier, too—more vital and vigorous, with greater physical stamina and emotional strength. Your relationships—with everyone, but especially your love—are more harmonious. Those who go without it lose out on a source of revitalization, and possibly open the door to health disorders."

I'm a lover not a fighter. I am typically a lovey-dovey, sweetheart of a girl. Yes, I'm big, loud and opinionated, often using off-color remarks to make my point. I've said some nasty things about the government and organized religion, sure, but in essence I'm a big softy. However, in the pursuit of peace, I sometimes have to switch modes from SNUGGLE to KILL.

I once went to a party at a club where there was supposed to be piles of hot, nubile chicks running around topless with shots of vodka for the guests (a liquor promotion thing). But the OLCC (Overtly Lying Cheating Cunts) had shown up just shy of my arrival and deemed the premises under threat of closure should any offending mammary peek its way into plain sight. So all but a handful of women split, and the ones that stayed were of the desperate 3AM last-chance type, the women who, if you were sober, you would want as much as an old wad of chewed gum stuck under a barstool at the Magic. Even more appealing was the sorry pack of drunken idiots who had come solely to see some titties for free and hadn't yet realized that the show was off. So it's me, a dash of nasty sleestack pirate hookers and roughly 250 drunk and super-frustrated dorky guys.

To complicate matters, the party was for a venomous radio personality who reigned king of the He-Man Woman-Haters Club. He had already whipped his throng into a heaving sweaty mass of hate-belly-bucking, beer-farting yorking elephant seals with nowhere to vent their frustration. The air was thick and hot with smoke, beer breath, and a funk that smelled like hot dog water and feet. No cute girls, no free hooch, and a whiff of "RAPESTOCK" in the air. I decided it was best to go.

Unfortunately, three giant twits had decided that I was very attractive and wanted to talk to me. I could only assume that's what they wanted since one of them grabbed my entire head with one hand to push my hat in my face. What a flirt! I set my hat right and smiled up at the guffawing, bleary-eyed lady-killer who was now very much in my way.

I imagined he must've been thinking, "Grabbing girl's head funny; me look COOL." I wanted to ask if his hands were smarting from his poor knuckles being dragged around everywhere, but decided quickly that action would be better. So I guffawed back at him and, with one hand on his hot, squishy chest, shoved him a step back. I smiled a big fat smile, as if he and I were in on some big joke. His little piggy eyes dimmed a bit as if he thought, "Hmmm... Girl strong; me not feel cool now. Me should say something."

"Yer pretty tough for a girl, huh?"

"Yeah, well, I haven't always been a girl." I giggled back.

Suddenly he gave the wind up and BANG! A smack-n-grab of my entire right ass cheek.

I wheeled on them. The towering porky trio were chuckling. "Har-har... He sure got YOU!" So I chuckled back, "Har-har... Yeah, you SURE got me. That was a GOOD one!" My vision went a little soft and a howling wind noise rushed up into my ears. I waited a second or two, wound up and, still giggling sweetly as if laughing with them, open-handed roundhouse bitch-slapped the guy so hard that he spun around and dropped his beer.

I kept laughing. His friends stopped laughing, and the spurned Lady Killer found no humor in the situation whatsoever.

Feeling I had totally blown my chances of ever scoring with this stud bull, I thought it best to leave. His eye was watering and his fat pink face was markedly red and puffing out on one side. With some diplomacy and a cheap "look over there!" trick I managed to escape.

I don't understand the appeal of grabbing a stranger's goodies. It doesn't get you laid, a lot of times you won't even get looked at, and it could get you seriously dusted off. Last time someone grabbed my stuff I sent most of him to the hospital (the rest of him was stuck in clotted chunks in the punk rock rings I used to wear). It is, let's just say, a pet peeve of mine.

I really am a lovey-dovey sweetheart of a girl...Just don't touch me.
