Jessica Dougherty

"The Eyes Have It"

By BlackDove

I love giving my friends sex toys for their birthday. Depending on their personality, I am always rewarded with a look of total shock or complete gratitude. Either way, it's always worth it. This passion for risqué gift-giving finds me in the "toy store" more than a few times a year. The only problem is, my focus is usually distracted by one thing: the art. I could have a whole wall of butt plugs in front of me, but if there's an Olivia painting above it, I get caught up in daydreaming about owning it. A whole bin full of midget porn could be ignored in the blink of an eye because of a Lorenzo Sperlonga print. It happens every time—the classicist in me outweighs the perv.

It's this love of classic erotic art that really attracted me to Jessica Dougherty's work. She specializes in erotic, pinup style fine art, using digital media and good old-fashioned oil painting. Jessica's work is a modern mixture of classic pinup, naughty eroticism and provocative themes. She enjoys the traditional cheesecake pinup style, as it is meant to be fun, pretty and sexy, though not trashy.

Jessica goes for realism in her lines and colors; her subjects always portray a woman's natural beauty. Her concepts can be realistic or come with a twist of fantasy. My favorite piece of hers is of a gorgeous redhead in a vinyl two-piece outfit, straddling a massive lollipop. She never really goes off the deep end like some comparable artists, but she does tempt reality from time to time, especially in her comics. Her paintings include everything from leather-clad cowgirls to fur-lined divas. There are corsets, nudity, and butterflies—everything you could want in a painting of a woman.

They say "the eyes have it," and Jessica's work proves this to be true. I could cover my walls in the exquisite expressions the faces in her paintings portray. The depth of her subject's eyes and the juicy fullness of their lips is enough to set the heart pounding.

I took some time to browse Jessica's well-laid-out website. As I was browsing, I made my way to her "commissioned pieces." These are jobs where people hire her to paint exact concepts, be it for a company logo, an advertisement, or even tattoos. I began to notice that the most intriguing pieces, the ones that stood out to me the most, all had the same category header: Private Commission.

These are the pieces that truly capture a model's inner energy, because the model is there simply to be admired. There is no corporate backing, no website following a close deadline; simply a beautiful girl who realizes her supple youth won't last forever. Sure, there's a hint of narcissism in the desire to own a large nude painting of yourself, but as they say, "if you've got it, flaunt it."

After all, while outer beauty changes and matures, the youthful splendor we are blessed with will fade, as much as we try to deny it.

Jessica Dougherty agrees. She is a firm believer that beauty radiates from inside, and she finds that the strongest models are the real women of the world—the soft and supple, opinionated and bitchy, inviting and compassionate women we meet every day, not necessarily your typical supermodel.

Jessica Dougherty is a passionate artist who harnesses the true beauty of a woman. She's been painting her whole life and sold her first painting to a gallery in Ohio in 2001. Since then, she's contributed pieces to the Seattle Erotic Art Festival (the last three years), the Las Vegas Museum of Sex, and she even had a Toys in Babeland solo show.

This artist is definitely gaining notoriety in this city, and it's a well-deserved recognition. It won't be long before Jessica's work starts appearing in "toy stores." I just might have to consider changing my gift-giving policy to include artwork.

For more information, and to see a collection of her works, please visit www.jessicapinups.com
